1 project deck containing project cards and two draw decks

- inAction draw deck - contains inActions only
- Department of 'X' draw deck - contains Office Politics, Resume Boosters, Agenda items

(The idea is to split these up so that you can either tailor your style towards either completing projects, or being a dick, or a combination of both.)

Gameplay

Each turn, a player can draw up to 3 cards of any combination from both decks. This way players can either attempt to complete projects, or look to engage in petty office politics and backstabbing in order to move up the chain. Players may then play any number inAction cards on their projects, office politics cards, or resume boosters. Finally players may seek to 'share the load' - ie trade inAction cards with other players.

Every 4 rounds, there is a quarterly team meeting where players each take a turn in order to complete and turn in any projects that they have completed. Agenda items can be played by other players to stop the player whose turn it is from completing their project (backstabbing).

Every 4th team meeting is called the christmas party. There are special Agenda items that can only be played at the christmas party. After each turn at the Christmas party, players tally up their development points, which determines their next job title.

Cards

1. Project cards - at the start of each year, project cards are laid out on the table to the value of the number of players plus 2. First pick of the projects goes to the person with the highest annual salary.

Each project card has a quota where a specific combination of inAction cards to complete it.

The quota for projects can be reached at any time during the financial year, however you can only 'turn in' your projects at the quarterly team meetings. Upon completion of a project card at the quarterly team meeting, you are awarded the development score for that project.

The strategy comes in where at the team meeting you can use other cards (agenda items) to steal other player's cards or force them to play additional cards in order to complete projects and advance through the ranks.

2. inAction cards - A simple project completion mechanic (similar to Catan) where there are 4 card types and 1 special card type that completes a project outright. The idea is that these cards will form part of one deck that can be drawn from during each turn.

Proposed inAction cards

1. Data analysis (Analysing)
2. Stakeholder consultation (Planning)
3. Budgeting
4. Literature review (Writing)

Special inAction card

1. Outsource to a consultant - instantly completes a project.
3. Resume boosters - playable at any time, these cards rank your player up towards promotion based on the value of the card. Resume boosters are in the same draw deck as agenda items, and office politics cards.
4. Agenda items - playable at the quarterly team meeting or christmas party. Offensive agenda items are cards that can be played as a player tries to turn in their project to prolong the project by forcing players to play additional inAction cards, or to steal the project, or inAction cards from another player.
5. Office politics - playable at any time. These cards can be used to steal inAction cards, or to negatively affect other players, or to advance your own projects/resume.
6. Additional responsibilities/Machinery of Government - must be played immediately when they are drawn. You must then meet the requirements of these responsibilities before you can play any additional inAction cards on your projects.

Cards

Base Types

- Office politics - playable on another player during your turn
- Resume boosters - playable on yourself during your turn
- Agenda Items - playable on another player during the quarterly team meetings or Christmas party
- Machinery of Government - must be played immediately when drawn. Affect all players
- Other duties as directed - additional to projects, require project completers to complete - must be completed by Christmas Party else there will be a penalty. These cards offer no rewards as 'other duties as directed' is written into your contract

- InActions (Previously Project Completers) - played on projects to partially complete them, 4 card types. These could include - stakeholder engagement, review of literature, scoping, etc.
- Projects - cards that reward a player with points when the required actions have been complete.

Other cards

- Role cards - these cards determine your rank in the game, and can be put in your lanyard. There is a card for each role.

A bit of context.

I spent quite a bit of time going through the cards, and it was really hard to picture what the game would look like, and how there would be any strategy involved. So I thought we could go in this direction? Here goes:
